

BLOODLESS REVOLUTION SUCCESSFUL

PRESIDENT EBERT AND ASSOCIATES ARE DRIVEN OUT AND REACTIONARY FORCES, INCLUDING MONARCHISTS, AND PAN-GERMANISTS, ASSUME CONTROL

KAPP CHANCELLOR LUTTWITZ HIS AIDE

GUSTAVE NOSKE, MINISTER OF DEFENSE, UNABLE TO WEATHER STORM WITH LOYAL TROOPS AT HIS COMMAND—FOCH CALLS SUPREME COUNCIL

Berlin, March 13.—The government of President Ebert has been overthrown.

Dr. Wolfgang Kapp, president of the Fatherland party, has assumed the chancellorship. General Luttwitz is minister of defense.

The revolution was peaceful. The government's fall followed announcement yesterday that a revolutionary plot had been discovered.

The plot was fostered by reactionaries, including monarchists and pan-Germans, and involved sections of the army. Gustave Noske, minister of defense, immediately ordered the arrest of Dr. Kapp and Captain Pabst, but was too late.

Dr. Kapp, who has assumed the chancellorship, is known as a violent reactionary and has opposed the Ebert government since its inception. As head of the powerful Fatherland party he was considered an advocate of restoration of the monarchy.

Kapp has been reported as closely in touch with activities of the pan-Germanist groups, who have been backing Field Marshal von Hindenburg for the presidency. Von Hindenburg was last reported as having accepted the offer to become a candidate.

The fall of the Ebert government may be fraught with the most far-reaching consequences. Allied leaders have made every effort to insure its security, publicly declaring that any change of government in Germany would be sure to endanger the treaty of Versailles.

Ebert depended for support largely on troops of Gustave Noske, his minister of defense, who crushed the Spartacist and other radical outbreaks. While Noske had full control over the police and volunteer troops, his hold on the regular army was weak. The disaffection of this element, headed by officers who retained, secretly at least, allegiance to the former kaiser, probably forced Noske to give up his post without fighting.

Reports that the revolution was being made current for months. Pan-Germanists and monarchists recently have been working power.

The revolution will bring the allies face to face with these problems: forcing the new government to adhere to the treaty of Versailles; securing stronger guarantees from Holland that the former kaiser, now interned in the Dutch nation, will be so guarded that there will be no opportunity for his return to Germany; and forcing the new government to adhere to the allied decision to make Germany punish her own war guilt by trial before a German tribunal at Leipzig.

Ebert Flees in Auto
London, March 13.—A Berlin dispatch says the Lokai Anzeiger, in an extra edition, reports that the Ebert government, after refusing to accede to the ultimatum of the revolutionists, fled in autos. Ebert and his wife left Berlin at 5 a. m., the paper said. Chancellor Kapp dissolved the Prussian assembly this morning, papers said. The city is quiet and traffic normal. Soldiers are patrolling the Wilhelmstrasse and stationed about the Hotel Adlon, headquarters for the various foreign missions.

Warned in Advance
London, March 13.—A Berlin dispatch says the revolution was known in the German capital at midnight. Battle troops accompanied a marine brigade, which moved toward the city from Doberitz, 10 miles west of Berlin. When news of the approach of the hostile forces reached Berlin, Generals Oldenhausen and von Oven and Lieutenant Colonel Wetzel left the city and met the troops, warning them of the consequences of their action.

German Envoys Anxious
Paris, March 13.—The German peace delegation received a message direct from Berlin at 9 a. m., declaring the revolution had been without bloodshed up to that time. The delegates said they considered themselves as still representing the government of Frederick Ebert. They awaited official confirmation of reports of the Ebert administration's fall. The Germans hunted Paris newspaper and cable offices, anxiously scanning every line of news from the Teutonic capital.

Dictatorship Is Rumored
Paris, March 13.—A Berlin dispatch reports that the new government of Germany aims at a military dictatorship with a cabinet of specialists. Although Dr. Kapp, the new chancellor, is known as a reactionary, the dispatch says there is no evidence he intends to attempt re-establishment of the monarchy.

Foch Calls Meeting
Paris, March 13.—Marshal Foch today called a special meeting of the supreme council to consider the German revolution.

Loyalists Hold Ground
London, March 13.—A Berlin dispatch reports that the western part of the city is occupied by the revolutionists. The eastern part of the city, the dispatch said, including the government buildings, is held by loyal republicans.

Will Observe Treaty
Paris, March 13.—The terms of the treaty of Versailles will be carried out by the new German government, it was announced by newspapermen in Berlin today by the press bureau established by the new government, according to a Berlin dispatch by way of Basle.

Situation Most Serious
Paris, March 13.—The French foreign office has information that the leaders of the revolution in Germany unquestionably are monarchists, officials said today. The office feels certain the situation in Berlin is most serious.

Monarchy Proclaimed?
Paris, March 13.—A Berlin dispatch says that a monarchy has been proclaimed in Germany.

Nation Remains Calm
Basle, March 13.—News from the provinces declares that calm prevails everywhere in Germany and that a majority of the people are in favor of the counter-revolution.

Allies Forward List
Paris, March 13.—The allies' list of war guilt has been sent to the Berlin government, it was learned today. The list totals 46 names. A death sentence is demanded for each of the accused. The allies reserve the right to take other measures in each case if they consider the findings of the German tribunal at Leipzig, before which the accused will be tried, as inequitable.

PROTEST DECREASE IN PRICE OF MILK

Central Wisconsin Association of Graduate Veterinarians Adopts Resolutions Against Alleged Discrimination

The Central Wisconsin Association of Graduate Veterinarians, at its meeting held at Marshfield recently, adopted a set of resolutions protesting against decreasing the price paid to farmers for milk through the efforts of the state division of markets. The resolutions follow:

"Whereas, It has come to our notice through the press that Alvin C. Reis, attorney for the Wisconsin division of markets, is conducting an examination in regard to cost of production of milk, and that there has been a decrease in price paid to the farmer, and still another reduction promised, and that the price paid for the month of February to the farmer was $2.15 per eight-gallon can, which is less than eight cents per quart. As this price for milk is very much less than any other commodity of anywhere near equal value.

Therefore, Be It Resolved, That the Central Wisconsin Association of Graduate Veterinarians go on record as being opposed to any reduction in price paid for milk until like reduction has been made in all other lines. And it is the sense of this association that quality should be first in the minds of the consumer rather than price.

And Whereas, It is the belief of this association that this is class legislation.

Be It Resolved, That we protect any further reduction in price paid to the farmer for milk, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to Governor Dr. W. R. Swan of Stevens Point, who has been secretary-treasurer of the veterinarians' association for three years and was re-elected at the recent meeting.

WILL COMMANDEER OIL IN OKLAHOMA

Government to Take Over Production in Osage Indian Fields—Stevens Point People Formerly Interested

Washington, March 13.—The government has decided to take over the entire oil production of the Osage Indian nation, totalling 15,000,000 barrels a year, to insure its supply of fuel oil for the navy, shipping board and war department, it was learned today.

The Osage Indian reservation, one of the richest oil fields in the world, is in Oklahoma. Numerous Stevens Point people have held stock in oil producing concerns there and several local companies were formerly owned by them to develop leases. The Whiting Oil company, which was composed almost entirely of local people, disposed of its holdings there three years ago.

GOLDBERG LOSES KINGSBURY SUIT

Ordered to Vacate Building Which He Is Alleged to Have Agreed to Surrender to Owner, W. E. Kingsbury

CITIZENS BANK IS MOVING IN Defendant Accepts Result and Bank Is Already Taking Possession

In justice court Friday G. L. Park, justice of the peace, decided in favor of the plaintiff the suit of W. E. Kingsbury versus Samuel Goldberg. Goldberg is ordered to vacate the building at 421 Main street, occupied by him for several years as the Fashion Shop.

Wanted the Difference
The Citizens National bank, without being a party to the suit, was indirectly a sufferer because of it, and was indeed the innocent cause of it.

Goldberg in January conducted a closing out sale, announcing in advertisements in the Journal that he was going out of business. He had a lease on the building which ran at least another year, and possibly longer, at $10 a month. He negotiated with Kingsbury for the cancellation of the lease, and the owner understood that it was the tenant's wish to be relieved of the responsibilities under it. Then Kingsbury rented the building to the Citizens National bank as temporary quarters, while the new bank was to be constructed. The bank was to pay $100 a month if it occupied the store for three months or less, and was to have the last three months free if it remained a year.

Goldberg sold the furniture in the building to the bank, and also disposed of his fixtures to E. V. Martin. But when the bank was prepared to move, he declined to surrender the building. He declared his intention to remain, to put in new fixtures and new stock and to keep up the business. He stood on his rights under the lease which he had not surrendered in writing, and which he denied intent to surrender verbally. He insisted that, if he yielded his rights, he be paid the difference between the $10 a month called for in his lease and the $100 a month the bank was to pay.

Demand Reward
The owner brought suit to oust the tenant, W. E. Fisher representing him in justice court, while W. E. Atwell represented the defendant. An interesting feature developed in the trial when the plaintiff's attorney called the attention of Goldberg to an advertisement inserted by the Kelly Sales system, promising $500 reward to anybody who could show that Goldberg did not intend to sell out and retire from business.

"You now say that you don't intend to retire from business?" he asked. "Yes," said the witness. "Then I give you notice right here that I am a candidate for that $500. You have offered the reward publicly and you now swear you didn't mean it."

Goldberg said that he was not his ad, but the ad of M. L. Goddard, of the Kelly Sales system, and denied responsibility. It is possible that suit may be brought against the Kelly company to collect the reward it offered.

Bank Gives Up
Following decision of the justice court in favor of Kingsbury, the Citizens National bank began today to move into the building. The work of packing the present building over the heads of the occupants was begun on Wednesday. George E. Nelson, D. E. Frost and Dr. C. von Neupert, who occupied the upper floor, have moved out. T. A. Moorman & Co. of St. Paul, who have the contract, began work on the rear, and as soon as the bank is out, will rush the work of demolition.

Great safes, burglar-proof, will be set up in the new quarters, and as additional protection a watchman will be stationed in the building to be temporarily occupied. Burglar insurance, hold-up insurance and fire insurance have been placed and the bank will really be better protected than in its old quarters.

SUM ASKED RAISED IN ONE COLLECTION

St. Stephen's Congregation Furnishes $1,200 for Special Cause While Raising Big Building Fund at Same Time

The collection taken up at St. Stephen's church Sunday, for the new boiler and the electric lights at St. Stephen's school, realized $1,050 in the Sunday responses. Several members of the congregation have been heard from Monday and Sec. J. A. Cashin believes sum needed, $1,250, will have been subscribed.

It was an unusually successful collection. It was announced by Rev. J. C. Hogan on the preceding Sunday, and its complete success is evidence of the regard in which the pastor is held by his people who, without any special urging, seemed animated by desire to make his first important collection all it should be.

The collection is distinct from the church building fund collection to which the congregation is subscribing liberally.

STEVENS POINT DRAWS MADISON

Central Wisconsin Basketball Champs to Play Whitewater Normal - Winners in First Contest Next Week

WILL PLAY THURSDAY NIGHT

Contest Will be the Second of Tournament—Madison Rated Among the Best

The Stevens Point High school basketball team, winner of the central Wisconsin sectional basketball tournament, clashes with the Madison High, winner of the Whitewater tourney, in the second game of the state tournament at Madison next Thursday evening at 8:15 o'clock.

Word received in this city Friday from Madison by the Journal Gazette announces the team which the locals had drawn as opponents and at the time when the contest would be played. The state tourney begins on Thursday and continues throughout Friday and Saturday with the championship game on the last night. Each of the competing teams is the winner of a Normal school sectional tourney, and the winner at Stout is also entered.

Leave on Wednesday
Coach P. M. Vincent of the High school, Coach S. A. Tension of the State Normal, and the local team members will leave Stevens Point next Wednesday morning via the Portage line, arriving in Madison that afternoon. Several local fans will accompany the quartet.

Madison Five Strong
In drawing Madison, Stevens Point is matched up against one of the strongest teams entered. "Hoops" is that if the central Wisconsin champs can down their opponents of the first game, they will have a good chance to carry off the tournament championship.

Disaster in Football
Madison Highs gave Stevens Point a defeat in football last fall which will long be remembered because of the big score piled up by the winners. The locals, after playing brilliant football throughout the season, traveled to Madison, there to be defeated by the undefeated score of 78 to 0. The coming basketball fight between the two schools will give the locals a chance to even things up and for this reason the Stevens Point-Madison game should be of special interest, aside from its direct bearing on the state championship. The defeat at Madison will eliminate the losers from a chance to win first place.

The memory of that tragic moment, strangely enough, was not to live in Andrea's mind by reason of the sight of the collapse of MacCloster's bulk, but by what followed immediately after. Never could she forget the sudden stilling of the whirling and the instantaneous smile, broadening to a grin, that dawned on the face of every native.

The black throng backed step by step before the terrific heat of the flaming ruin. Their scorching faces, glistening with sweat, but their eyes hung greedily on the crumpled, sprawling mass that was all that was left of MacCloster. In the pleasurable surfeit of the moment they were careless of the fact that the doom of the entire crowd was fixed.

Trevor turned on them in a white rage and with a well-aimed bullet shot an assegai from between the legs of a great hulking brute whose mouth was slaving with revolting enjoyment of the scene. The black's face went gray with fright; his eyes came back with a snap from their sensual feast. Many of his companions laughed aloud, but others only flicked thick lips in bestial hunger for more slaughter.

"You!" cried Trevor, passing the muzzle of his revolver into the quivering naked stomach of the man he had frightened. "Get your crew together. Take me home."

Half an hour later Andrea found herself once more in MacCloster's boat, but in spite of the fact that all its appointments and the crew were the same with the exception of the one black who had been killed, it seemed utterly strange to her eyes, now no longer glazed by misery. She turned to Trevor, who had not spoken to her since first he had joined her in the cabin. "The boat is quite different," she said. "It's as though I saw it for the first time."

He gave her no answer beyond a noncommittal grunt, nor did he look at her. His eyes were fastened far ahead on the river, tracing out the swirl of the current and deep water. A troubled look came into Andrea's face; she glanced at him and her lips parted twice in the half-suffled that precedes kindly speech. "You think I ought to thank you?" she asked. "I haven't the words; if I tried my heart would choke me."

"Thank me?" said Trevor, casting her a casual look. "What for?"

Andrea's lips trembled. If only the fire hadn't happened just when it did, she thought, if only it had given him time to find her, to take her in his arms! "For saving me," she answered simply.

"For saving nothing," affirmed Trevor. "For saving the nothing that is left of your beauty and freshness and honor after the touch of that heat."

Overwhelming shame stained her cheeks; she felt all that was noble and generous within her shivering into a straggling heap. She tried to speak, to protest against his hardness and injustice, but she could only gulp. For hours they sat in absolute silence, and gradually the cold that had struck her heart spread through all her body until her teeth began to chatter.

"Why are you doing that?" asked Trevor sharply. "It isn't really cold."

"I'm d—d—doing it b—because I c—can't help it," chattered Andrea. "I am c—cold." She pressed herself against his body, as though she begged for his arms around her. He drew away from her.

She crouched back in her corner and turned upon him the accusing eyes of a child that has been cruelly wounded; then her womanhood came to the rescue. It reasoned with her, told her that the time for pride had passed, for if she lost this man she lost all men forever. No longer could she say "my world" and think of parties, Broad street, taxicabs and the smartest restaurants; her world was here beside her, to win or lose.

When it came to describing her hours with MacCloster, she harped with supreme feminine intuition on a single fact. Again and again she gave him to understand that except for lugging her across his shoulder to the boat, MacCloster had not once so much as laid a finger on her. So careful was her narrative in its logical sequence of detail that it could not fail to carry conviction with it. Trevor gradually melted to the extent of filling his pipe and lighting it.

She told of her entering the court around the great coin with MacCloster, of his discovery that a case of gin had arrived with his freight and of the oily change that had come to his voice. At this point in her story Trevor forgot to smoke. He clutched the hot bowl of his pipe in a grip that made his knuckles show white. She could feel him listening with his whole tense body. She hurried on to her climax; to the description of her strategy in removing the clients and of MacCloster's terrifying attack. She even repeated some of his words. "He said, 'Waiting up for me, dearie?' and then I drove the nails into his hands and when he snatched them back, I hit him across the head and he fell. And then I heard you coming. I thought I had gone mad, that it was not with my ears but with the longing of my heart that I heard you coming. When I called and you answered I forgot that I had ever known fear; I knew that I was safe, forever and forever."

"Good girl," said Trevor huskily. He reached out and patted her hand but his thoughts were not altogether with her; they were lingering behind, hovering over the scene of her elemental battle with MacCloster as though he sought to step his soul in that revelation in an effort to drown for once and all time the memory of twenty-four hours of torturing jealousy.

"So you're not jealous any more, are you?" pleaded Andrea.

"Jealous?" exclaimed eternal man impatiently. "Who said anything about jealousy? It's one rotten quality that, thank God, I don't possess. It's the cancer-worm that eats into the heart of trust. A man that feels in demands the woman he loves."

"How extraordinary," murmured Andrea. "Because I don't believe any woman in the world ever really loves an unjealous man. Of course," she added thoughtfully, "we despise jealousy—but that doesn't keep us from adoring it in just one man."

Trevor was silent for a long time, pondering on this absurd and unanswerable argument. The sun arose and set to work at once to overheat the world; Andrea grew warm and then drowsy. She began to nod and her body to incline. If it had dropped in a direction directly opposite to that in which it actually did, she would have fallen into the river; as it happened, she fell against Trevor's shoulder. He first assured himself that she was really asleep and then slipped his arm around her and held her close.

He forgot his burns and bruises, his fatigue and hunger; he looked back with exultant pride upon the mad-dream of emotions that he had ridden to reach this haven of his soul's peace. The feverish haste with which he had dug out the airplane and patched it up, the white rage in which he had hurled himself with it into the air, the absolute and marvelous determination of the steady, unwavering flight that had carried him straight to MacCloster's crash, all became oblivious to him of the power of that which is within us to rise eternally to superhuman heights on the wings of a little love.

He glanced downward at the fair head pressed so close to his shoulder that the white beam of his helmet shaded it as well as his own and let his eyes follow along the curled-up length of Andrea's figure. She seemed while he recognized the gentle mood that had so overburdened her tongue, he felt now an aching within him to guard, not the Honorable Andrea Pellor, but this much dearer creature of his own making, from the burning touch of tongues as well as hands.

He threw up his head as though to a revivified and ennobled determination that was above fear and murmured a confirmation of the creed that had been born, full-fledged, from her lips. "Whether you want me or mock me, the die is forever cast; your truth and your untruth, your weakness and your strength, purity or taint; I shall take you all and taking you, take only myself; for love is an indivisible, an integral possession!"

SENTENCE SUSPENDED YOUTH GIVEN A HOME

Court, Lenient and Boy Is Placed on Farm at Arnot Under Proper Home Surroundings Where He Can Make Good

Execution of sentence has been suspended by Judge W. E. Owen in juvenile court in the case of Lawrence Chapman, local young man, who was arraigned in juvenile court for an alleged disturbance at the McKinley school where he had been a pupil. The boy was to have been sent to the industrial school for boys, but on order of the court has been given another chance to make good.

Young Chapman has been placed on the Wagner farm near Arnot, where he has advantageous home surroundings, and with good behavior and proper conduct will be permitted to return there. If he fails to behave Judge Owen will issue a commitment and he will be taken to Wisconsin.

Mr. Wagner was one of a half dozen residents of the city and county who have been brought into juvenile court for minor offenses, following an appeal made by Judge Owen asking for the names of families which assume responsibility for any boys whom the court desired to place in homes. Names of others who volunteered have been listed and if future offenses arise which in the opinion of the court are deserving of leniency, the families will be communicated with in an effort to save the youth from a reform school sentence.

SALOON PROPRIETOR PAYS FINE OF $150

Former Stevens Point Man Who Conducts Golden Eagle Bar Near Grand Rapids, Haled in Federal Court

C. F. Rosenberger, proprietor of the Golden Eagle saloon located about three miles east of Grand Rapids on the Grand Rapids-Stevens Point road, paid a fine amounting to $150 in federal court at Madison a few days ago after he had been arraigned before Judge Sanborn. The charge against him was selling liquor in violation of the war time prohibition act. Mr. Rosenberger is well known in Stevens Point, having formerly resided in this city.

The case was one which attracted considerable attention some time ago when several citizens were called to La Crosse to testify before the grand jury in regard to buying liquor at the Golden Eagle. It was stated by several who were there that the testimony was reported to be insufficient to convict, and it was thought the case had been dropped. The jury evidently received additional evidence, however, calling the defendant back to Madison, where he appeared before the judge and pleaded guilty.

The witness in the Rosenberger case was said to have been a federal employee who stopped off at Grand Rapids to check up income tax reports. It is said that he checked his reports during the day but in the evening visited several saloons in Grand Rapids and vicinity. A few weeks later the people who had entertained the federal man were called to La Crosse to testify.

Rudolph Northing, who operated a saloon 15 miles southwest of Nekeosha, on the Nekeosha road, was also called to Madison on a similar charge to the one preferred against Rosenberger and was also fined $150.

WILL RE-STOCK LITTLE PLOVER

Spring Water Trout Stream in Town of Plover to be Improved for Fishing by County Game
Association

PLAN TO REMOVE ROUGH FISH

Suckers and Pickers Will Be Netted
Out of Springville Pond
Early This Spring

The Portage County Fish & Game Protective association will restore the Little Plover river as a favorite trout stream for sportsmen by re-stocking it with trout fry and removing pickers and suckers from Springville pond into which it empties four miles south of this city.

The plan has received the endorsement of the state conservation commission and officials of the local association will take initial steps as early as this week. The stream should again be abundant with trout within two or three years' time, as the results of the efforts of the association.

To Check "Running"
Wire meshes will be placed in the channel of the Little Plover at its mouth at the upper end of Springville pond. These meshes will probably be placed this week, their purpose being to prevent pickers and suckers which have wintered in the pond, from "running" up stream this spring. The fish will turn back when they reach this artificial barrier.

Use Nets in Pond
Later on in the spring the pond will be lowered at the Rossier mill on the Plover road, in order to place nets in the pond and allow the pickers and suckers. The pickers will be taken out and placed in the stream below the mill, from where they can find their way down stream to the Wisconsin river, while the suckers caught in the nets will be given away to any persons desiring to eat them. This work will be carried out under the supervision of an official of the commission.

While it will be impossible to clear the pond entirely of all fish except trout, the netting should accomplish big results and the association believes the plan will meet with direct results.

Will Restock Streams
Government fingerlings will be secured if possible, after the suckers and pickers have been removed, and will be planted in the Little Plover. The stream is an ideal one for trout and under advantageous circumstances the fish should develop and increase rapidly.

Years ago the Little Plover was a new area for sportsmen and it was not uncommon for trout fishermen to make big catches on the stream. It is only a little more than three miles in length but for nearly its entire length is naturally protected by brush and woods. The water is clear and almost transparent, and remains cold even during the hot summer days, rising in spring at the source of the stream and flowing rapidly down to Springville pond. In recent years it has been difficult to make good catches of trout on the Little Plover and because of the conditions which make it almost an ideal trout stream, the fish and game association is determined to restore it as a favorite fishing ground. Their plans will be learned with much interest by many local sportsmen.

Several Passenger Conductors Take
New Runs—Transfers Go in to Effect Friday

Conductor F. B. Richmond of this city resumed his railroad duties Friday after being off duty since the latter part of January on account of illness. Mr. Richmond suffered an attack of tonsillitis and was also afflicted with an abscess on his right side, but has practically recovered. He is an extra passenger conductor and has been assigned temporarily to passenger runs Nos. 11 and 12 and will work on these runs for the next 30 days.

Conductor J. W. Saxon, who has been working on passenger runs 1, 2, 3 and 4 since the first of February, transferred Friday to runs 17 and 18, taking the place of Conductor A. T. Anderson of Chippewa Falls, formerly of this city, who returned to his former run on runs 5 and 6 when they were re-instated last Monday.

Conductor J. E. Fisher of this city, who has been working on 17 and 18 since the first of February, returned to the service, his transfer to 1, 2, 3 and 4, the change going into effect Friday. He will remain on this run until Conductor John McKie returns.

Mr. McKie has been in St. Louis, Tex., since the first of February, where he went to visit his son, Frank McKie, who is superintendent of the Santa Fe road at that place. While visiting his son, Conductor McKie was afflicted with an ulcerated foot, this trouble preventing him from returning to his railroad duties on the Soo as soon as he planned.

Changes and improvements will be made, including the installation of new heating and lighting system, and a slight rearrangement of rooms, and the Hardware Mutual will take formal possession about June 1.

The company's business has been growing so rapidly that it is cramped for room in its present quarters, but will have adequate floor space in the Majestic building, where the main floor was formerly used as a dance hall and is large, light and airy.

MORE FUNDS NECESSARY

This is Greatest Need of Railroad,
Supt. F. W. Urbahn Says

"The great problem before the railroads of the country today is to secure money to buy needed equipment and to expand their facilities," declared Superintendent F. W. Urbahn of Fond du Lac, a brother of Superintendent C. E. Urbahn of this city, in an address before the Rotary club in Fond du Lac a few days ago. "If the roads are able to get money and the public has enough confidence in the railroad management to invest in railroad stocks, then the present situation will be rapidly cleared up," he said, adding that "an effort will unquestionably be made on the part of the railroads to give better service to the public."

Many Fond du Lac County Rural

Fond du Lac county will face a serious shortage in rural school teachers during the coming year, providing the school boards in the various sections of the county do not increase the salaries of the teachers before the next school term opens. According to numerous complaints from several parts of the county many of the present teachers do not intend to return next year, as they state they are able to get more money in other work. About 25 per cent of the teachers have so far announced they will not return to their schools.

The Garden farmer will find the Ford Model T One Ton Truck an especially valuable factor in his business because of the flexibility as well as the reliability of the service given by this splendid truck. The worm-drive of manganese bronze carries all the power of the motor to driving the Truck, and there are combined in larger and heavier form all the elements which have made the Ford Model T Car the greatest motor car in the world in point of service. The Ford Truck with its worm-drive is most economical in operation and maintenance. There is very little, if anything, to get out of order at any time; there is the simplicity in control; there is the convenience in the flexibility of the car, it will turn in a circle of forty-eight feet; it accommodates itself to narrow alleys, and it "stands the gaff" of hard work day after day, and month after month, to the great satisfaction of the owner. There is hardly a line of business activity where the Ford One Ton Truck is not really a necessity. Come in and talk it over.
